Dance studios dedicated here was a class in session, but nobody minded.

The college held a dedication ceremony for the dance studios in the Dow Center on Friday, March 28. The space is so in demand that a class was meeting even while the dedication took place in the central hallway connecting the rooms, but the audience was given leave to tour the space anyway.

It was an appropriate conjunction, with visitors given a chance to see for themselves that the burgeoning department of dance puts the three studios to good use.

A plaque in the second-floor hallway celebrates the department's origins and the studios' benefactors:

"Begun as individual classes under the leadership of Maxine DeBruyn, the Department of Dance at Hope College has evolved into a fully accredited, nationally recognized program.

These dance facilities, renovated in 2002, are provided through the generosity of the following donors: Mrs. Wilda Barber; Mr. William DeLong; Mr. Alfred Joldersma '40, in honor of Grace Joldersma; Dr. Titus Van Haitsma '32, in honor of Eleanor Van Haitsma; Rollin M. Gerstacker Foundation; Charles J. Strostacker Foundation.'

Participants in the ceremony included Alfredo M. Gonzales, associate provost; President Dr. James E. Bultman '63; Professor DeBruyn, who is the Dorothy Wiley DeLong Professor of Dance and chair of the department; and Dr. George Kraft, professor of kinesiology and chair of the department.

The department began in 1966 with a single class in beginning modern dance, taught by Professor DeBruyn. The department now offers 44 classes taught by 10 full-time and part-time faculty, enrolling more than 350 students per semester. Currently, some 81 students are majoring in dance, and another 33 minoring.

In addition to the studios in the Dow Center, the department also holds classes in the Julianna Room in the basement of Durfee

A dedication ceremony for new studio space also celebrated the history of the department of dance. Unveiling a plaque installed in the Dow Center are President James Bultman '63 and Maxine DeBruyn of the dance faculty. Also pictured are Dr. George Kraft of the kinesiology faculty; Evelyn DeBruyn Van Dorp; and Dr. Titus Van Haitsma '32.

"Quote, unquote"

Quote, unquote is an eclectic sampling of things said at and about Hope College.

On Friday-Saturday, May 2-3, hundreds of alumni returned to campus for class reunions, an opportunity to catch up with old friends and consider the impact of their Hope experience. Here are reflections shared by Dr. Ev Nienhouse '58 during his 45-year reunion—with reference to a talk he gave during his 40-year reunion in 1998. He is retired from the chemistry faculty of Ferris State University.

"I decided on the spot [in 1998] to honor two former professors, J. Harvey Kleinheksel and Paul G. Fried, both of whom had made an enormous difference in my life. J. Harvey Kleinheksel in my professional life as a teacher of organic and biochemistry and forensic science techniques. He indeed was my mentor as, early in my career, I found myself patterning my lectures after his style with those clear and concise explanations, those probing questions and his valiant attempts to turn his students on with his infectious enthusiasm and commanding presence.

"And Paul Fried, as a wonderful friend and mentor who encouraged me and others to participate in the [Vienna Summer School] Program, thereby making us internationalists, way before the terms 'Global Society' and 'Global Awareness' entered our vocabulary. I'm thankful that Paul is present this morning to be recognized for that wonderful gift.

"Our previous speaker, Jane Gouwens Bach, wrote me a lovely note after I gave those remarks, saying in essence, 'Ev, you captured the spirit of the evening.' I shall never forget that note, Jane, as it is exactly that, plus my desire to identify what attending Hope College has meant to me in preparing me for my academic career, which I wish to share with all of you in my remaining time.
"Being a Hope graduate opened many doors for me academically. In part, it was my affiliation with Hope College which led to an offer to teach at Ferris State College, which became my base of operation; in part, it was affiliation with Hope College which led to being offered an appointment as a Visiting American Professor at the University of Groningen (Netherlands); for securing a position as a Visiting Professor at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill; and for providing an opportunity to accept a position as a Visiting Scientist at the SEMO Regional Crime Laboratory. In large part it would be my affiliation with Hope College which caught the interest of the chemistry faculty at Dartmouth College to be offered a position of Visiting Professor of Chemistry; and would permit me to continue a delightful and challenging 15-month teaching sabbatical at Montana State University and the University of Colorado at Boulder. All of these institutions and agencies were aware of Hope College's fine reputation.

"Indeed, my affiliation with Hope College opened up many doors during a rich and rewarding academic career. But, it would be the broad based liberal arts education, the fine teachers, some of whom we honor here today, and the Christian environment which would prepare me for life and for my life's work, namely: contributing to the academic successes and making a difference in the lives of nearly 4,000 students at Ferris State and other institutions where I had the privilege of

"I'm very proud of the fact that two of my former students hold endowed chairs at major universities, one at Princeton and the other at the University of Southern California. And earlier this week, I spent some time with another former student, now in his 50s and with greying temples, who is doing some wonderful work as the director of the Au Sable Institute of Environmental Studies which enjoys a national reputation. Yes, I owe a great debt to Hope College for preparing me for life and my life's work. I'm enormously proud to be a Hope graduate. In particular, as a graduate of the great Class of '58!"

ALUMNI PROGRAM EXPANDS: The college is placing added emphasis on connecting with its constituencies. In an effort to expand efforts to reach out to alumni, parents, and friends of the college, Hope is reorganizing the alumni program while committing additional human resources to its public relations programs and the college's Web site.

"This organizational shift is a strategic effort to further enhance the college's reputation regionally and nationally," said President James E. Bultman '63. "These changes deal specifically with the development of an integrated marketing plan supported by an enhanced public and community relations effort and an increased emphasis in building a strong base of financial support from our alumni and parents. It is also an acknowledgement of the growing demands on our current staff in the alumni and public relations office who have served the college exceedingly well for many years."

The alumni office will become part of the Advancement Division under the leadership of Scott Wolterink '88 who has been promoted to associate vice president for college advancement. Wolterink will also continue to oversee the Hope Fund and serve as a regional advancement director. As part of the reorganization, the college will be adding staff to support the alumni and parents relations program.

Tom Renner '67 has been promoted to associate vice president for public and community relations and Lynne Powe '86, who has served as alumni director since 1992, has been appointed associate director of public and community relations. Powe will also take an active role in the management of the college's Web site.

The move is a recognition by the college that its Web site should become more a part of an integrated marketing strategy. The site received 833 front–page "hits" in January of 1996; in April of 2003, there were 95,831.

The public and community relations office will continue to focus on sharing news of the college and the Hope family through publications such as news from Hope College, and through the current media relations and sports information programs. Several broad–based constituent relation programs will continue and others will be added.

Greg Olgers '87, director of information services in the office of public relations since 1988, has been promoted to director of news media services and is being named editor of news from Hope College.

RESEARCH RECORD: Hope again holds five grants for summer student research from the National Science Foundation's "Research Experiences for Undergraduates" (NSF–REU) program, more than any other liberal arts college in the country.

Among all institutions nationwide, including major research universities, only 24 others hold five or more of the awards. Hope is the only liberal arts college in Michigan to hold any of the grants, and only two universities in the state (MSU and U of M) hold as many or more.

Hope holds the grants in biology, chemistry, computer science, mathematics, and physics and engineering. It is the 12th consecutive year that at least four Hope departments have had NSF–REU support.

Elvis is calculus natural

You may not be able to teach an old dog new tricks, but you can get him to solve a calculus problem.

That's what Dr. Tim Pennings, associate professor of mathematics, realized when he took his Welsh Corgi, Elvis, for an outing to Lake Michigan to play fetch with his favorite tennis ball.

"Most calculus students are familiar with the problem of finding the optimal path from point A to point B," he said. "Standing on the water's edge at Point A, I throw the ball into the water at Point B. Elvis runs along the shore a portion of the way, then plunges into the lake at a point of his choosing and swims diagonally to the ball. By the look in Elvis's eyes, it seems clear that his objective is to retrieve it as quickly as possible."

Dr. Pennings assumed, then, that Elvis unconsciously attempts to find a path that minimizes retrieval time—a problem typically solved using techniques from calculus. But he wanted to test his theory.

So, he clocked Elvis's running and swimming speeds and spent three hours collecting data measuring the distance between the ball and the shore and where Elvis jumped into the water to retrieve it. Plotting the results revealed that Elvis almost always chose a path which is in close agreement with the optimal path calculated mathematically.

Dr. Tim Pennings's Welsh Corgi Elvis knows intuitively what mathematicians can find formulaicly: the best route through different terrain.

In fact, given complicating factors—waves, the movement of the ball in the water and others—Dr. Pennings suggests that dogs may choose a path that is actually better than the calculated ideal.

"Although he made good choices, Elvis does not know calculus," Dr. Pennings said. "Though he does not know the calculations, Elvis's behavior is an example of the uncanny way in which nature often finds optimal solutions."

The topic was a natural for Dr. Pennings, who specializes in mathematical modeling—the way in which mathematics describes natural phenomena. As a teacher, he appreciates having a new opportunity to relate his discipline to everyday experience.

An article he has written about his work with Elvis has been published as the cover story of the May, 2003, issue of The College Mathematics Journal, complete with a photo of the dog relaxing on the beach with tape measure and ball nearby. (The article is available online at www.maa.org.) A variety of news organizations have since picked up the story, including not only the local papers but also The Chicago Tribune, abcnews.com and the BBC.

In addition, Dr. Pennings, accompanied by Elvis, has also given talks on the subject at Hope and a variety of area schools.

Through Hope's grants, undergraduate students from both Hope and elsewhere are conducting research full–time with Hope faculty members for eight to 10 weeks this summer, and are receiving stipends as well as support for housing, travel and other expenses. They are working with students whose summer research at Hope is supported in other ways.

MATH CHAMPS: For the second consecutive year, a student team from Hope has won the Lower Michigan Mathematics Competition.

The contest was held on Saturday, April 5, at Saginaw Valley State University. The winning three–member team from Hope consisted of sophomore Daniela Banu of Bucharest, Romania; junior Stefan Coltisor of Bucharest, Romania; and Caleb Gleason '03 of Hudsonville, Mich. Coltisor and Gleason were also on Hope's winning team

It is the 10th time that Hope has won the competition in the event's 27–year history.

A total of 17 teams, with two or three members each, participated, from six colleges and universities and two high schools from across lower Michigan.

Hope was represented by 11 students organized into four teams.

SINGING HONORS: Hope students earned multiple honors during the statewide National Association of Teachers of Singing Student Audition held on Saturday, April 5.

Approximately 180 contestants from throughout Michigan competed in the event. The audition was held at Michigan State University in East Lansing.

Joshua Brandenburg '03 of Mount Vernon, Ohio, won first place in the "Junior/Senior Musical Theater" category.

Jennifer Boone of Wyoming, Mich., won second place in the "College Freshmen Women" category. Crystal Stabenow '03 of Mount Pleasant, Mich., placed second in the "College Senior Men/Women" category.

Kristi Hatch of Pleasant Lake, Mich., placed third among "College Sophomore Women." Alyson Payne '03 Three Oaks, Mich., placed third among "College Senior Men/Women."

SPRING SERVICE: Nearly 400 Hope College students spent their spring break helping others.

The students participated in 25 service projects that took them throughout the United States as well as to the Caribbean and Latin America. The college's spring break ran Friday–Sunday, March 14–23.

Legacies: A Vision of Hope

Kresge grant relies on future gifts

A major challenge grant from The Kresge Foundation of Troy, Mich., has been approved for the college's science center project, in a way designed to add incentive for future supporters.

Hope will receive the $850,000 grant when the college raises an additional $3.1 million for the new building by March of next year.

Hope is both building a new science center and renovating the existing Peale Science Center. The combined facility will house the departments of biology, chemistry, biochemistry, the geological and environmental sciences, nursing and psychology.

The project totals approximately $36 million, including $26.6 million for the new building. The foundation's grant has been awarded for the new construction.

The award will add value to every gift the college obtains in the coming months for the building, according to President James E. Bultman '63, since each contribution will not only support the facility in its own right but will also help Hope obtain the Kresge funding.

"I'm very pleased that we have been approved for a challenge grant for the construction of our science facility," Dr. Bultman said.

"We have about nine months to secure the remaining funds, so this will present for us a considerable challenge," he said. "But, having said that, we also look at this as a wonderful opportunity to complete funding for the new building and a very strong affirmation of Hope College and the new facility."

Work on the new facility is underway, even as the fund–raising effort continues through the college's Legacies: A Vision of Hope campaign. Construction began in March of 2002 on the new building, which will open with the start of classes in the fall. Renovation of Peale will follow during the next year.

The award will add value to every gift the college obtains in the coming months for the building, since each contribution will not only support the facility in its own right but will also help Hope obtain the Kresge funding.

The center has been designed to complement the college's on–going emphasis on collaborative student–faculty research as a teaching model, with the addition of interdisciplinary classroom space reflecting the way that the boundaries between disciplines continue to blur.

The Peale Science Center opened in 1973. In addition to the changes in scientific knowledge and teaching approaches during the past 30 years, the student body at Hope has grown by nearly 50 percent.

Hope has consistently ranked at or near the top nationally in science education among the country's 1,100–1,200 liberal arts institutions. The college's research–based approach in teaching helped earn Hope a tie for fourth place nationally among all undergraduate institutions for "Academic Programs: Undergraduate research/Creative projects" in the America's Best Colleges 2003 guide published by U.S. News and World Report. Hope has consistently held more National Science Foundation (NSF) "Research

The exterior of the science center is well along as the August opening of the building approaches. A major challenge grant from The Kresge Foundation of Troy, Mich., will help fund the building—but only if other members of the Hope family provide additional support of their own.

Experiences for Undergraduates" grants than any other liberal arts college in the country. A report from the NSF placed Hope in the top 25 nationally among baccalaureate colleges as a source of future Ph.D. recipients in the natural, physical and social sciences, and engineering—including third nationally in chemistry.

At the time of the March grant announcement, The Kresge Foundation had awarded 38 grants in 2003 for a total of $25,439,000. It will continue to make new grant commitments during the balance of the year.

"In this cycle of grantmaking, our Trustees were pleased to support a range of organizations reflecting almost the entire breadth of the nonprofit sector," said John E. Marshall III, president and CEO of The Kresge Foundation. "This diverse group is responding to the new challenges presented by their communities or sustaining activities that have demonstrated their effectiveness."

In 2002, the Foundation reviewed 565 proposals and awarded grants totaling $109,251,000 to 158 charitable organizations in 33 states, the District of Columbia, Canada and England. Grants are made to institutions operating in the areas of higher education, health and long–term care, arts and humanities, human services, science and the environment, and public affairs.

Grants are made toward projects involving construction or renovation of facilities and the purchase of major capital equipment or real estate. Grant recipients have raised initial funds toward their respective projects before requesting Foundation assistance. Grants are then made on a challenge basis, requiring the raising of the remaining funds, thereby insuring completion of the projects.

The Kresge Foundation is an independent, private foundation created by the personal gifts of Sebastian S. Kresge. It is not affiliated with any corporation or organization.

Since 1960, The Kresge Foundation has awarded Hope College approximately $3.47 million, including the current $850,000 challenge grant, for a variety of projects. A $395,000 challenge grant in 1992 in conjunction with the "Hope in the Future" campaign supported the acquisition and maintenance of equipment in several science disciplines.

Projects supported by The Kresge Foundation have also included the renovation of Van Zoeren and VanderWerf halls from 1988 to 1990; the construction of the Van Wylen Library, dedicated in 1988; the renovation of the Sligh furniture factory as the De Pree Art Center and gallery, dedicated in 1982; and the renovation of the college's main dining hall in 1979.

Others have included the construction of the Peale Science Center, dedicated in 1973; the construction of the Dow Health and Physical Education Center, dedicated in 1978; the construction of the DeWitt Student and Cultural Center, dedicated in 1971; and the construction of VanderWerf Hall, completed in 1963 as the Physics–Math Building. The Dow Center's natatorium is named for the Foundation.

Architects for the science center project are Ballinger of Philadelphia, Pa., and Jickling Lyman Powell Associates Inc. of Troy. The construction manager is Granger Construction Company, based in Lansing.

Legacies: A Vision of Hope, launched in October of 2000, aims to raise $105 million by December. The four primary initiatives are: renovating and expanding the Peale Science Center; constructing the DeVos Fieldhouse; increasing the endowment; and general campus improvements, including the construction of the Martha Miller Center for communication, modern and classical languages, international education and multicultural life. Thus far, the campaign has raised more than $100 million.

Ken Gibson of faculty dies

Faculty member Dr. C. Kendrick (Ken) Gibson died unexpectedly on Saturday, April 19. He was 61.

He was a professor of business administration. A member of the faculty since 1986, he had also coordinated the Hope in the Future strategic planning process during 1989–90 and directed the college's Carl Frost Center for Social Science Research during 1991–92.

The college has named the "Economics, Management and Accounting Faculty Recognition Award," presented to outstanding seniors, in his honor. The anouncement was made during this year's Honors Convocation, held on Thursday, April 24.

Dr. Gibson was born on March 4, 1942. He graduated from Louisiana State University in 1964 with a bachelor's degree in business administration, and completed his MBA at the university in 1969. He completed his doctorate in business administration at the University of Arkansas in 1978.

He was a veteran of the Vietnam War, and served as an officer with the U.S. Army's 101st Airborne Division in Vietnam from 1967 to 1968.

Immediately before joining the Hope faculty, he had been a professor of management and marketing and dean of the School of Business at Henderson State University. He had also previously been an associate professor of management at Indiana State University at Terre Haute, and an assistant professor of management and marketing at the University of Wisconsin at La Crosse.

Prior to completing his doctorate, Dr. Gibson had also worked in investment sales and sales management, and as vice president of a home construction and development firm.

He was the author of numerous articles published in scholarly journals. His article "An Empirical Investigation of the Nature of Hospital Mission," published in Health Care Management Review, was selected for inclusion in the "best of HCMR" book Health Care Management: Strategy, Structure and Process.

Dr. Gibson edited the book Annual Advances in Business Cases published by the Midwest Case Writers Association, which he served as president during 1985–86. His publications also included the instructional guide Case Enrichment Portfolio for Selected Cases in Strategic Management, published by McGraw-Hill Inc.

He was an elder at Park Christian Reformed Church.

Survivors include his wife, Sally; four children: C. Kendrick and Kristin Gibson of Austin, Texas, Clayton Gibson '96 and Michael Faith of Ypsilanti, Mich., Heather Bair '97 of East Lansing, Mich., and Nathan '00 and Sonja Bair of Ann Arbor, Mich.; a brother, Ford and Becky Gibson of Shreveport, La.; and nieces and nephews.

Research views dune history

A Hope professor is taking the long view of sand dune movement, tracking the way they've behaved for the past 5,000 years.

"The basic idea is to find out when the dunes began to form; find out when they were active—in other words, when were they growing and moving; and find out when they were stable—when they were sitting in one place," said Dr. Ed Hansen, professor of geology and environmental science and chairperson of the department. "And eventually to try to figure out why they're sometimes active and sometimes stable."

He is interested in the topic as a research question, but he also appreciates the practical benefits of better understanding the dunes' behavior. "If we've got an idea of what the natural history is, it would be easier to manage them," he said.

Dr. Hansen recently received support for his research through a $50,000 grant from the Petroleum Research Fund. The grant will provide stipends for Hope student researchers, laboratory testing and materials for the next three years.

Dr. Hansen has been studying the dunes in the Holland area since 1998.

"We now have worked out a really detailed history around Holland," he said. "We probably have one of the most detailed histories of a dune complex ever worked out."

Through the new grant, he will choose four or five other sites along the eastern coast of Lake Michigan to develop a more complete view. "When we're done we should be able to generalize—to have a general dune history—for the southern part of the lakeshore, for the area roughly from Muskegon south," he said.

According to Dr. Hansen, the dunes formed about 5,000 years ago. The lake prior to that time had been much lower than it is today. It subsequently rose to a height several feet higher than its present level and then fell quickly, which is when the dunes developed.

In the Holland area, he noted, the more inland dunes stabilized and became forested, as they still are, about 4,000 years ago. The dunes closer to shore were fairly fluid until about 2,000 years ago, at which time they became stable for some 1,500 years.

The dunes locally started shifting again about 500 years ago, behavior that continues. Dr. Hansen and his team have tracked one area shore dune moving inland at a rate of about 4.5 feet per year.

Dr. Hansen notes that researchers don't yet know what prompted the times of stability and movement. "We would love to know why," he said.

One implication, however, is clear: the phenomenon of dune movement isn't man-made. "Certainly some of the things we do may enhance it, but it started before any Europeans came and cut down the first tree or someone rode the first off-road vehicle," he said.

To map the history of the shoreward dunes, Dr. Hansen has charted tell–tale signs in the sand: visible lines of dark soil that run horizontally through today's dunes. "What they are is the top soil, essentially, of a former surface of the dune," he said. Radio carbon dating helps determine the age of the former surfaces.

For the wooded back dunes, where former surface soils are hidden, he and his team do some digging to collect soil samples, and have another form of testing done to determine how long the sand has been buried: optically stimulated luminescence, a new technique that essentially reveals how long the sand has been out of the sun.

Dr. Hansen is conducting his work on dune history in collaboration with Alan Arbogast of the Michigan State University faculty. He is also engaged in another project that looks at more recent dune behavior, work that he conducts with Deanne van Dijk of the Calvin College faculty.

He has made multiple presentations at professional conferences concerning his research. During the 2003 annual meetings of the Michigan Academy of Science, dunes lie lines of dark soil, the tell-tale remnants of previous ridgelines and a key part of Dr. Ed Hansen's on-going research into the history of the distinctive West Michigan terrain feature.

Arts and Letters, held at Hope in March, he led a special session on "The Geology and Geomorphology of the Lake Michigan Coast" that included a trip to the area dunes and presentations by specialists from Michigan, Indiana, Wisconsin and Canada.

Campus Profile

Faith in action

There are many signs.

Professors with a sincere interest in mentoring their pupils. Courses that require thinking about the meaning of life. Some 400 students choosing to spend their spring break helping others through mission and service trips.

Hope is intentional and up–front about blending outstanding scholarship and vibrant Christian faith in meaningful ways designed to change lives for the better. It's right there on page one of the Catalog: "The mission of Hope College is to offer with recognized excellence academic programs in liberal arts... in the context of the historic Christian faith."

The mix is designed to serve students well, whatever path they choose. It's so good an approach, according to President James E. Bultman '63, that Hope does it even though it isn't easy—as demonstrated by the relative absence of others on the field.

"The approach does not have many models, because the history of higher education is that ultimately an institution chooses one path or the other," he said. "Either they are very strong spiritually but weak educationally, or they are very strong educationally and weak spiritually."

very strong educationally and weak spiritually."

"I am unequivocally committed to demonstrating that Hope will continue to be able to do both simultaneously at the very highest levels," President Bultman said.

Definitions and the spirit with which they are understood are key to making it work. How might academic inquiry relate to and even examine faith commitment? How directly does faith perspective shape the academic program?

Some Christian schools are prescriptive, even requiring members of the community to sign statements committing to certain philosophies and behaviors. That's not Hope, which is invitational in outlook.

"So in our admissions policy we nowhere ask students to either articulate a Christian faith as a prerequisite to coming nor do we demand anything of them when they get here as far as adherence to the Christian faith is concerned," said the Rev. Dr. Tim Brown '73, who is concluding two years of service as the Hinga–Boersma Dean of the Chapel at Hope and is also the Henry Bast Professor of Preaching at Western Theological Seminary. "They're invited to enter in at any point."

Hope is intentional and up-front about blending outstanding scholarship and vibrant Christian faith in meaningful ways designed to change lives for the better.

"In many ways this is the riskiest position to hold, because you've just opened the door to a wide range of convictions, a wide range of opinions. It's difficult to claim common ground—you always have to hammer it out," he said. "But if it's graciously and vigorously done, it models for students a way to live in the world, where even among Christians there's not unanimity of thought and action around every imaginable thing."

To Dr. Joseph La Porte, assistant professor of philosophy, the college's approach means that religion is "on the table" throughout the academic program.

"It's not just in the Chapel that you have faith discussed here, but it's in the classroom and elsewhere too," he said. "I'm taking advantage of an opportunity that I wouldn't have at another place, and that is the opportunity to help students to come to terms with their Christian faith in an intellectual way, to help them try to understand better what it is that they believe."

"It's not an area that we think we have to leave outside because of doubts about whether people would have any interest or appreciation," he said. "We know we're going to get interest, we know we're going to get appreciation, and we know that we gain from respectful discussion."

Beyond teaching in his department, Dr. La Porte plays a leadership role in the "Inquiring Minds" discussion group. Intended for all members of the campus community, the group features open dialogue on a wide range of topics, including subjects that intersect with religion such as free will, the afterlife, and atonement—concepts "that an intellectually mature Christian needs to come to terms with or at least have thought about," he noted.

Dr. Marc Baer, professor of history, developed the "Veritas Forum" at Hope as a way of fostering additional campus consideration of faith perspective. Started at Harvard in 1992 and since emulated by dozens of campuses in the U.S. and abroad, the event is designed to get students to think about the Veritas, or truth of Jesus Christ. Hope has held a forum every two years since 1997; this January, the event focused on the relationship between personal choice and life purpose, or calling.

Given his own sense of calling, Dr. Baer some years ago also started the Pew Society to help link students interested in academic careers with Hope faculty mentors, in particular to encourage the students to consider teaching as a form of Christian service.

The program draws, he noted, on a quality in abundance at the college: strong faculty connection with students. "It's one of the great virtues of Hope that we take mentoring very seriously," he said.

By emphasizing interaction that often occurs naturally at Hope even on its own, Dr. Baer is hoping the students will value their own future students, even if they find themselves in a setting very unlike Hope: one that doesn't.

"My hope would be that they would be very different academics than they would have been otherwise," he said. "That if they were blessed by the mentoring experience, that no matter where they are—even at schools where it would be a sacrifice to do it and not politically correct, and not smart for resume building—that they will nevertheless recognize their responsibility to treat both graduate students and undergraduates not as numbers but as human beings."

The concept of calling receives serious attention in a more formal academic way at the college as well. The capstone Senior Seminar program provides one example: graduating seniors are encouraged to articulate their life view particularly in light of the Christian faith.

Calling will be given even more emphasis, throughout the college, starting with the next academic year through the new "Program for the Theological Exploration of Vocation" funded through a $2 million grant from the Lilly Endowment Inc.

"I think the Lilly program provides us with an opportunity to intentionally ask questions that link faith and life," said the Rev. Dr. Steven Hoogerwerf '77, assistant professor of religion and a member of the seven–member committee that drafted the project proposal.

"It's designed to be very inclusive," he said. "We hope that any department could find a place in the program. That people across the spectrum of religious affiliations will all find a place to be a part of the programs. And that people who wouldn't consider themselves religious would still be able to ask and answer some of these questions."

"I like the fact that we don't have to sign something to come here. Here it's a choice to live a Christian life, and it makes it much more real, in my opinion."

Continue the tradition of courage

Reflecting on the national challenges of the present, Commencement speaker Dr. Fred Johnson called for courage, and offered as a model the resolve that overcame the challenges of the past.

"This is a time for courage, to find answers rather than merely ask questions; to see clearly when so many have lost—and are losing—their vision; to be bold instead of joining the timid," said Dr. Johnson, an assistant professor of history, in his address titled "A Time for Courage" on Sunday, May 4.

In presenting several examples from history, Dr. Johnson quoted President Franklin Delano Roosevelt, who in 1933 during the Great Depression declared, "This great Nation will endure as it has endured, will revive and prosper."

"Those words were true then, they're true now, and they'll be true in the future," Dr. Johnson said. "Placing our faith in a God whose loving hands have created and control individual and national destinies, we need not fear. We need not lose hope. We need not lose our way."

Approximately 4,500 attended this year's Commencement, the college's 138th, held at Holland Municipal Stadium. More than 630 Hope seniors participated, the largest number ever. The class included graduates from throughout the United States and from foreign nations including Bolivia, Bulgaria, China, Ethiopia, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Pakistan, Peru, the Philippines, Russia and Sri Lanka.

In his address to the graduates, Dr. Johnson recalled the uncertainty and turmoil of Sept. 11, 2001, and its aftermath.

"Placing our faith in a God whose loving hands have created and control individual and national destinies, we need not fear. We need not lose hope. We need not lose our way."

 Dr. Fred Johnson, assistant professor of history

"Two years ago, when graduation was still more far than near, we were an international giant of presumed invincibility," he said. "And then, on a horrific morning we crowded around radios and televisions, trying to comprehend if what we heard and saw could truly be happening. That... world had changed."

"Anxiety overflowed. Unanswered questions cluttered our days," he said. "The sledgehammer of war battered down our front door."

Such national challenges, Dr. Johnson noted, are nothing new.

"Fear. Loss. Hostility. Despair. Chaos. Hope graduates we've been there before," he said. "We've climbed our way out of some tough, tight places. We've been alone when those who could help wouldn't, and those who wanted to help weren't allowed. We've had friends who sneered at our dreams, and strangers who found it easy to believe in us."

Dr. Johnson reviewed and honored the commitment and sacrifice of others in times of crisis, in both the distant past and more recently. He offered examples such as the women who struggled for suffrage; the 186,000 black Union soldiers "who couldn't afford to lose the fight"; the everyday Americans who defeated Nazi Germany; the lynched blacks "whose loss of life became our Civil Rights gain"; the Vietnam veterans "who did their duty for a sadly ungrateful nation."

The graduates, Dr. Johnson said, had already shown themselves courageous. They had themselves endured, he noted, in the face of 9/11.

They had also, he said, shown themselves capable—as demonstrated by their achievement in becoming college graduates.

"For four years you sought that challenge and met it," he said. "You leaned forward into the hard blowing winds of change, traveling the distance one carefully placed and determined step at a time, reaching this location and moment today, strong, skilled, and more prepared for the lives you are about to live."

He encouraged them to put the qualities to good use.

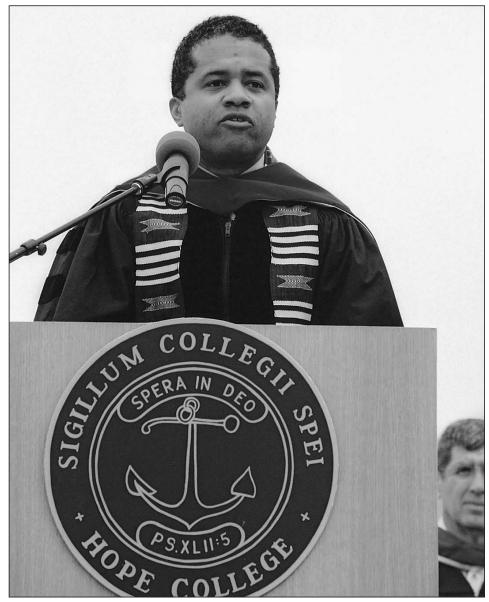

"This is a time for courage, a time when you, the newest phalanx of reformers, trail-blazers, gatekeepers, trendsetters, standard-bearers, healers, teachers, warriors, and peacemakers, must rush to the front of humanity and put your education, hearts, hands, and spirits to the task," Dr. Johnson said. "Don't avoid the struggle for turmoil builds spiritual and emotional muscles; hardship cultivates the focused resolve of endurance; and overcoming delivers the priceless gift of wisdom."

The college's Baccalaureate service took place earlier in the day. The Rev. Eugene Sutton '76 of Washington, D.C., who is canon pastor at Washington National Cathedral and director of the Cathedral Center for Prayer and Pilgrimage, delivered the address, "The Race is Human."

He based his text on Matthew 10:34–39. In the New Testament passage, Jesus says that he has come "to set a man against his father, and a daughter against her mother, and a daughter—in—law against her mother—in—law."

Acknowledging the contrast between the tone of the passage and the celebratory event, Rev. Sutton opened with, "Okay, the first question of the morning is: who invited these verses to this graduation party?"

"There are some things you just don't want to hear when sitting in church surrounded by your fathers, mothers, sons, daughters, and other family members; things like Jesus saying that 'one's foes will be members of one's own household," he said.

Rev. Sutton suggested viewing the text less literally. "To take today's text as a call to destroy family loyalties would be as wrong-headed as to take any other isolated passage from the Bible to justify any action of hatred or violence against another," he said.

Instead, he said, the passage is about priorities.

"Jesus knew how powerful families are in our lives, and if we listen closely to what he's trying to tell us in those disturbing words in the Gospel of Matthew, then you just might hear a helpful word of warning about the danger of giving your family total allegiance," Rev. Sutton said.

"Certainly, it offers us an opportunity to reflect upon who we really are, and what we were intended to do on this earth," he said. "For the point that Jesus wants to make is: your sense of 'family' is too small!"

"Unless we can get beyond understanding that it is my family, my clan, my ethnic group, my race, my nation that is most important to me, then there is no hope for the world in which we live, and there is no hope that we can grow individually into the persons that we were created to be," Rev. Sutton said.

The sermon's title stemmed from an anecdote about a young man applying for a teaching position. When asked to identify his race, the candidate wrote "human."

"The idea of race is a social construct, a modern concept that was useful for the purpose of highlighting differences for the sake of power and domination, but it is not biologically real," Rev. Sutton said. "Scientists cannot find any genetic markers that are particular to one so-called 'race,' and absent from another 'race' of humans."

"Differences—real differences—are here to stay, and are obviously part of God's beautiful creation in all its variety," he said. "But what would it mean to gain an identity that so identifies with the other—the different one, those outside of your family—that one incorporates them into the circle of love that was previously only extended to 'other people like me'?"

"It would mean," Rev. Sutton said, "getting closer to the vision of God, who in today's very strong words through his son Jesus warned his hearers of maintaining an allegiance to individual families that limits their allegiance to the human family."

Don Luidens receives H.O.P.E. Award

Commencement became a father-daughter event for the Luidens family this year.

Martha Luidens was among the 630–plus members of the Class of 2003 who participated in the graduation activities on Sunday, May 4. Her father, Dr. Donald Luidens '69 of the sociology faculty, also received recognition, but as a surprise: he was named the "Hope Outstanding Professor Educator."

The "H.O.P.E." award, first given in 1965, is presented by the graduating class to the professor who they feel epitomizes the best qualities of the Hope College educator. In previous years announced during the college's Honors Convocation in April, the recognition was instead shared during Commencement this year so that the presentation could be made before the entire senior class as well as other members of the Hope family.

Dr. Luidens, a professor of sociology, has been a member of the Hope faculty since 1977. He taught courses during this year including the introductory "Sociology and Social Problems," "Criminology I" and "Criminology II," "Theoretical Perspectives" and "Senior Seminar," as well as independent study in sociology.

He joined the faculty as an assistant professor, was appointed to associate professor in 1983 and was promoted to full professor in 1993. He is a past chair of the department of sociology, and during 1989–90 he served on the college's Board of Trustees as a faculty representative.

In the 1980s he led students on study-abroad programs in both Japan and Israel. He has for several years served as one of the college's "faculty marshals," leading the senior class during its march to both Baccalaureate and Commencement on graduation day.

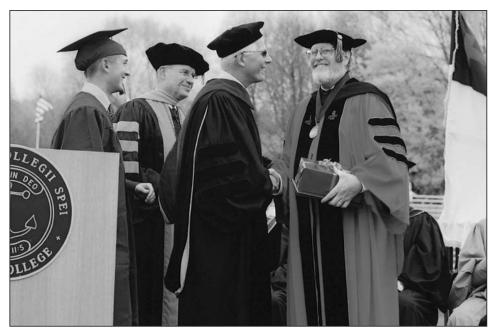

In 1987, he received the "Outstanding College Sociology Teacher of the Year Award" from the Michigan Sociological

Dr. Luidens has been studying membership trends in mainline Protestantism for more than two decades. He is the co–author of the book Vanishing Boundaries: The Religion of Mainline Protestant Baby Boomers, which received the 1994 "Distinguished Book Award" from the Society for the Scientific Study of Religion. He is co–editor of three books: Rethinking Secularization: Reformed Encounters with Modernity, Reformed Vitality: Continuity and Change in the Face of Modernity, and Reformed Encounters with Modernity: Perspectives from Three Continents.

His publications include numerous articles in scholarly journals. An article he co-wrote with Hope sociology colleague Dr. Roger Nemeth for The Church Herald, the denominational magazine of the Reformed Church in America (RCA), received an "Award of Excellence" in the 1998 Awards Contest of the Associated Church Press.

He and Dr. Nemeth, who have conducted joint research into issues of Protestantism and the RCA since 1986, led a seminar concerning their research during the "Winter Happening" program presented by the Alumni Association in February of 2002. They are co–organizing the triennial meeting of the International Society for the Study of Reformed Communities (ISSRC) that will be held in Edinburgh, Scotland this July.

variety of external grants in support of his research. Hope students have been active participants in the projects.

His 26 years on the faculty represent only a portion of his Hope history. He and his wife Peggy (McNamara) are both members of the Class of 1969. His parents Edwin and Ruth were members of the Classes of 1940 and 1942 respectively. All four of his grand-parents were also Hope alumni: Anthony and Mae Luidens, both of the Class of 1912, and Miner and Dureth Stegenga, both of the Class of 1915.

After completing a history major at Hope, Dr. Luidens went on to earn a master of divinity at Princeton Theological Seminary in 1972, and a master's and doctorate at Rutgers University in 1974 and 1978 respectively.

In addition to Martha, who graduated with a sociology major and will be continuing with engineering courses in the fall, he and Peggy have another daughter, Sara, who is a graduate of the College of Wooster and in April completed her MSW at Western Michigan University.

Hope presents honorary degrees

Hope recognized two alumni for service with honorary degrees during Commencement on Sunday, May 4.

The college awarded honorary degrees to Connie Hinga '49 Boersma of Holland, Mich., and her husband, the late Max Boersma '46, who died on Friday, Jan. 17, at age 78. The recognition celebrated the many ways through the years that they together served others, including their alma mater, according to President James E. Bultman '63.

"Max and Connie Boersma influenced so many in profoundly positive ways," he said. "That influence transcended social and racial boundaries, interest areas, gender and age, and denominational preferences. They were friends to all. Individually and as a couple, they demonstrated Christ's love and concern at every turn. They showed us how to live life to its fullest."

"Max and Connie were unsurpassed in their affection for Hope," President Bultman said. "Both of them were—and Connie still is—very involved in the life of the college."

Max Boersma was a longtime member of the college's Board of Trustees. He joined the board in 1981 and had recently been appointed to a seventh term; he was secretary of the board from 1982 to 2000.

He co-chaired two of the college's capital campaigns, both of which exceeded their fund-raising goals: the Campaign for Hope, which concluded in 1987, and Hope in the Future, which concluded in 1994. He was also active in the college's current capital campaign, Legacies: A Vision of Hope.

He was a president of the college's Alumni Association from 1957 to 1959.

Connie Boersma is a past president of the Women's League for Hope College. Her father, the late Milton L. "Bud" Hinga, was a member of the college's teaching, coaching and administrative staff for 29 years.

In conjunction with the Hope in the Future campaign, they created the endowment for the "Hinga–Boersma Dean of the Chapel" in support of the campus ministries program.

They both received a Distinguished Alumni Award from Hope in 1978. Friends and colleagues also established the "Max and Connie Boersma Scholarship Fund" at Hope in their honor.

The Boersmas were longtime residents of Grand Rapids, Mich., where they were active members of Central Reformed Church. They served as foster parents through the juvenile court system and helped initiate a Big Brother program in Grand Rapids. Max was also a past member and president of the Grand Rapids board of education.

Max retired in 1992 as executive vice president with Mazda Great Lakes of Grand Rapids, and in retirement the couple moved to Holland and near the Hope campus. They would frequently be seen taking their morning walk through campus. They rarely missed a campus activity and were regular attendees at many college functions, including the chapel services. Since Max's death, Connie has continued to be an active participant in Hope events.

ipant in Hope events.

All three of their children are Hope alumni: the Rev. Dr. William R. Boersma '75 of Holland; Elizabeth Boersma '77 Jasperse of Traverse City, Mich.; and the Rev. Paul Boersma '82 of Zeeland, Mich., who is the Leonard and Marjorie Maas Endowed Senior Chaplain at Hope. Three of their nine grandchildren are also alumni or current students.

Campus Notes

More than 350 students participated in 23 mission trips organized by the college's Campus Ministries Office. In addition, 25 students traveled with associate professor of kinesiology Dr. Steven Smith to Jamaica, and 24 students went to Georgia with the college's chapter of Habitat for Humanity.

The mission trips are a decades-long tradition at Hope, but it is in the past 10 years that interest in them has exploded. Nine years ago, the Campus Ministries Office organized seven trips. This year there were 23.

The Campus Ministries trips involved a variety of types of settings, including urban ministry and rural ministry within the United States, and service in Latin

ACCREDITATION INPUT SOUGHT:

Hope College is seeking comments from the public about the college in preparation for its periodic evaluation by its regional accrediting agency. The college will undergo a comprehensive evaluation visit on Monday-Wednesday, Sept. 22-24, 2003, by a team representing the Higher Learning Commission of the North Central Association of Colleges and Schools. Hope College has been accredited by the Commission since 1915. The team will review the institution's ongoing ability to meet the Commission's Criteria for Accreditation and General Institutional Requirements.

The public is invited to submit comments regarding the college:

Rodney Boyer, the Drs. Edward and Elizabeth Hofma Professor Emeritus of Chemistry, has been reappointed to a three-vear term on the Education and Professional Development Committee of The American Society for Biochemistry and Molecular Biology (ASBMB).

Dr. Boyer, who has been on the committee since 1985, is one of 15 members who represent private undergraduate colleges, graduate programs, medical schools, and the pharmaceutical industry.

The ASBMB is the largest organization of molecular life scientists in the United States and is affiliated with the International Union for Biochemistry and Molecular Biology (IUBMB). The mission of the committee is to promote the molecular life sciences through educational and informational activities for the society's members, the scientific community, and the general public.

Roberta Kraft named state teacher

Professor Roberta Kraft of the music faculty has been named the "Teacher of the Year" by the Michigan Music Teachers Association (MMTA).

She was honored on Friday, May 9, during a reception and dinner held in conjunction with the Michigan Youth Arts Festival at Western Michigan University in Kalamazoo.

It is the second major honor that Professor Kraft has received from the MMTA during the current school year. An adjunct associate professor of music, she received a Distinguished Service Award from the association on Monday, Oct. 21, during the group's state conven-

She had previously received area recognition for teaching excellence. The Holland chapter of the MMTA named her the local "Teacher of the Year" in

"Roberta Kraft has been a valued member of our staff for many years," said longtime Hope colleague Dr. Stuart Sharp, professor of music and chair of the department. "Her work with the keyboard skills program has helped many music majors to develop their practical keyboard skills and her dedication to the class piano offerings has encouraged many students to include the study of piano as part of their general studies at Hope College.'

"In addition, Roberta has served as accompanist for many student and faculty recitals and she has contributed strong leadership as the director of our accompaniment services within the department," he said. "It has been a pleasure to work with someone who so easily reflects the joy and commitment of a life dedicated to the art of music and to serving others.

Professor Kraft has taught at Hope since 1975, and maintains a private studio. She also performs actively with Hope students and faculty, as well as with her husband, George, with whom she has given roughly 300 programs.

Her association with the MMTA began through the local chapter, Holland Piano Teachers Forum, which was established in 1969 and of which she was a charter member. The chapter affiliated with the state organization in 1971-72, during the first of three terms that she has served the Holland chapter as president.

Professor Kraft was president of the MMTA from 1998 to 2000, previously serving as vice president for two years. Her activity at the state level has also included serving on the MMTA's 30-member Board of Directors as chair of Student Achievement Testing (SAT) Auditions.

She began her involvement with the Student Achievement Testing program through the local chapter. The program now tests more than 4,000 preparatory students throughout the state, stressing not only performances but also music theory, aural awareness, technique and sight-reading. She was local chair of SAT testing for five years.

Professor Kraft has taught public school in the Junction City, Kan., Holland and Saugatuck-Douglas school systems. She is a performing member of St. Cecilia Music Society of Grand Rapids, and a member of the American Guild of Organists and The National Guild.

She earned her bachelor of music education degree at Wheaton College and a master of music degree at Indiana University.

Deborah Weiss '75 Sturtevant's on-going research on the relationship between state government and nonprofit human service organizations formed the basis of a statewide conference held in

Dr. Sturtevant, who is professor of sociology and social work and chair of the department, is seeking to help nonprofits play a more effective role in the public policy process. The need is particularly critical, she said, as the state shifts away from direct governmental delivery of social services to contracts with private and nonprofit organizations. On average, she noted, human service nonprofits receive more than 50 percent of their funding from government sources.

In her most recent project, which she completed earlier this year, she surveyed 55 percent of the Michigan Legislature to obtain legislators' perceptions of the relationship between government and nonprofits. In a 1997 study, she had asked executives of nonprofits about their relationship with government policy makers.

The results of both efforts were reviewed in the conference in Grand Rapids, "Partnership in the Era of Term Limits: A Conversation between State Policymakers and Nonprofits," which state legislators and representatives of nonprofits alike attended. Dr. Sturtevant's presentation focused on four main areas: how nonprofits can be more influential in engaging legislators to respond to their needs; the effect of term limits; issues related to the federal emphasis on faith-based initiatives; and how the partnership between nonprofits and policy makers can be improved.

Mission Accomplished! On Every Front

t is a common occurrence for athletic teams to set pre-season goals. For the Hope men's tennis team this spring it was focussing on a mission.

The motivational message on the back of each player's shirt spelled it out — beat perennial MIAA tennis power Kalamazoo College for the first time in five decades.

An impossible task? No Michigan Intercollegiate Athletic Association (MIAA) team had beaten the Hornets in the last 241 dual matches dating back to 1962, when Hope accomplished what then was viewed as a major achievement because it was Kalamazoo's first loss since 1936.

Kalamazoo was 396–1 in the MIAA over the past 67 seasons heading into the April 15 match, which was being played in the Hornets' own Stowe Stadium.

All season long, Hope coach Steve Gorno had hinted that this might be the year. Quite frankly, Flying Dutchmen fans had heard that before. The fact that Hope had not even scored more than a single point in a match against Kalamazoo in 41 years was cause enough for more pessimism and than optimism.

Undaunted, the Flying Dutchmen put history aside and wrote their own chapter, pulling off not just a victory, but an overwhelming triumph by topping the Hornets 7–2

"Considering that we hadn't beaten Kalamazoo for 41 years, we entered the match with amazing confidence," Gorno told the Detroit Free Press. "It was some of the best college tennis I've ever witnessed. Some will call this a miracle. I call it a team giving its all."

With the longest winning streak by any amateur, high school, college or professional team in America coming to an end, the stunning victory was mentioned in several national publications, including Sports Illustrated.

This single accomplishment was representative of another outstanding year in intercollegiate athletics as Hope for the third consecutive year swept all three all–sports awards of the MIAA. Hope won for a record 25th time the Commissioner's Cup for having the best cumulative performance during 2002–03 in both men's and women's sport. The men's and women's all–sports awards were also won by impressive margins.

Hope captured conference championships in women's basketball, women's swimming and baseball, and co-championships in men's soccer, men's basketball and men's tennis.

OUTSTANDING SENIORS: Honored as the outstanding senior athletes were Amanda Kerkstra of Grandville, Mich., and Chad Carlson of Holland, Mich.

The recipient of the John Schouten Award, Kerkstra achieved All-America distinction as a four-year letterwinner in basketball. Carlson, who was presented the Otto van der Velde All-Campus Award, also lettered four years in basketball. His father, DOUBLES: 1. Mann–Dugan (H) d. Malvitz–Harding 6–2, 6–3; 2. Bradley–Ruemenapp (H) d. Dolbee–Rincon 7–5, 6–3; 3. Phillips–Jason Wagenmaker (H) d. Atallah–David Hinshaw 6–2, 6–2.

Robert '75, had also received the van der Velde award.

BASEBALL: The Flying Dutchmen captured their sixth MIAA championship in 10 years under coach Stu Fritz, posting a 16–2 league record and overall 20–17 mark. The teams appeared in the NCAA Division III tournament for the third time since 1998, but lost twice in the Mideast Regional.

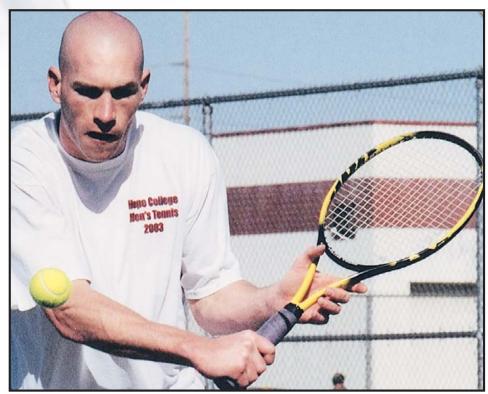

Senior outfielder Mike Van Beek of Hudsonville, Mich., was voted the league's most valuable player. An all–MIAA honoree for three years, Van Beek had an amazing 100 percent slugging average in conference games. Voted to the All–Mideast Region first team, Van Beek ended as Hope's career leader in several categories. A history major, he was also named to the Verizon Academic All–District team.

Joining Van Beek on the All–MIAA first team were senior first baseman B.J. Maas of Jenison, Mich., senior shortstop Casey Glass of Hudsonville, Mich., senior outfielder Kyle Blackport of Grand Rapids, Mich., and senior pitcher Matt Widenmier of Midland, Mich.

TENNIS: The Flying Dutchmen had to share

Senior Mike Van Beek wrote his name in the Hope record book with career marks for total hits, doubles, total bases and RBIs.

Senior Dan Mann finished his undergraduate career as Hope's winningest men's tennis player with 126 victories.

the MIAA men's seasonal championship when Kalamazoo won the conference tournament. The outcome came down to the final match on the court, a three–setter won by the Hornets.

Senior Dan Mann of Spring Lake, Mich., was voted the MIAA's most valuable player. He ended his career as Hope's winningest men's tennis player with 126 victories.

Mann and junior teammate Kevney Dugan of Holland competed in the Division III national doubles tournament, advancing to the quarterfinals. Mann and Dugan were unique among today's collegiate athletes, having competed at Hope in two sports: Mann in football and Dugan in soccer as well as tennis.

Mann, Dugan and senior Matt Bradley of Hastings, Mich., were voted to the All-MIAA first team. Bradley was also presented the league's Stowe Sportsmanship Award.

The Flying Dutch finished fourth in the women's MIAA tennis standings. Freshman Annaliese Fox of Alma, Mich., captured the first flight singles championship and was voted All–MIAA first team.

TRACK & FIELD: Hope athletes were MIAA champions in five events as the Flying Dutch finished second in the women's standings while the Flying Dutchmen were third.

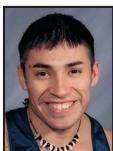

Senior Ed Perez of Hopkins, Mich., won the 400–meter hurdles for the third time in his career. Emily Schlitz of Potterville, Mich., repeated as champion in the women's javelin while junior Christy Watkin of Holland was a double winner, capturing the long jump for the second time and the triple jump. Senior Brooke Oosting of Grand Rapids, Mich., captured the 400—meter dash.

SOFTBALL: The Flying Dutch finished fifth in the MIAA standings while posting an overall 17–14 record.

Senior pitcher Andrea Adams of Fairgrove, Mich., and junior shortstop Kelly Kraft of Brown City, Mich., were voted to the All–MIAA first team. A two–time All–MIAA honoree, Adams set a career Hope pitching record for strikeouts (398).

GOLF: Senior Emily Colenbrander of Holland finished 31st in a field of 59 competitors at the NCAA Division III women's golf championship, averaging 87 strokes a round over the 72–hole tournament.

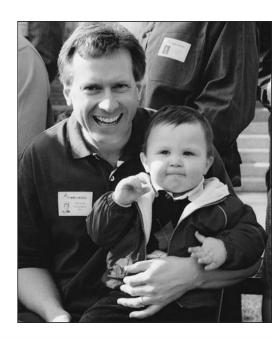

Freshman Annaliese Fox won the MIAA women's tennis championship while senior Ed Perez achieved All-MIAA track honors a fourth consecutive year.

Time Flies

It couldn't have been 20 years ago. Or 50. Or 65... Marriage. Children. Career. Retirement.

The milestones and moments that fill life also make it sail by. For three days in May, Flying Dutchmen from '38 to '83 had a chance to drop anchor on campus and consider the journey together.

Scholar's library becomes lasting legacy

Dr. Richard Wunder never attended Hope, but he is having a lasting impact on those who do.

Dr. Wunder, an art scholar who died on Sunday, Aug. 4, 2002, at age 79, left the college more than 4,500 books through his estate. The gift complements the several thousand books he had already donated to the college since 1984.

The volumes, more than 15,000 collectively, have been designated the "Richard Wunder Collection." According to David Jensen, director of libraries, together they provide Hope "with one of the finest college art history collections in the Midwest."

The volumes provide Hope "with one of the finest art history collections in the Midwest."

"I think this is an outstanding addition to our collection, particularly in art and art history," he said. "This was a scholar's collection, and there are some very fine works here."

"He had wide–ranging interests in art, so there are volumes on architecture, painting, sculpture, interiors, decoration, jewelry, fashion," Jensen said. "I don't know of any area of art in which he did not have some material."

The bequest includes a mix of books published from the 18th century to the present. In addition to volumes concerned with art and art history, the collection is rich in biographies, social histories, literary works, and works on religion and travel.

The gift also includes the research material that Dr. Wunder had collected while writing a book about American sculptor Hiram Powers, as well as Dr. Wunder's personal correspondence and unfinished memoir. A variety of other items were included in the bequest, among them formal clothing and furnishings, and have been shared with departments ranging from the department of theatre to the Joint Archives of Holland to the college's physical plant.

Dr. Wunder was introduced to Hope by John Dryfhout '64, who is superintendent and chief curator of the Saint–Gaudens National Historic Site in Cornish, N.H. Dryfhout was doing graduate work at the University of Michigan in the mid–1960s when he first met Dr. Wunder, who was visiting as guest curator. They became friends as their professional paths crossed in later years.

When in the early 1980s Dr. Wunder shared his concerns about his library, which he'd placed in storage when he had moved from his large house to a New York apartment, Dryfhout suggested a destination that could make a lasting difference.

"I said, 'Have you ever considered the possibility that this collection might be a great anchor for a college?," Dryfhout said. "This would make a fantastic collection for my college library."

That Dr. Wunder acted on the suggestion, Dryfhout said, was completely in character.

"He was an extremely generous person," he said. "He was generous not only to Hope College, but also to many institutions and individuals all over the country."

Dr. Wunder, who lived most recently in La Jolla, Calif., was a past president of appraisals and estates with Christie, Manson and Woods International in New York City.

The several thousand books donated to Hope by the late Dr. Richard Wunder are a major addition to the library's art history collection. David Jensen, director of libraries, stands with just a small portion of the total.

He was founding director of the Cooper–Hewitt, National Design Museum (now part of the Smithsonian Institution) in New York City, having previously served as curator of drawings and prints at the Cooper Union Museum. He had been a senior research fellow in art, assistant director, and curator of painting and sculpture with the National Collection of Fine Arts, Smithsonian (now Smithsonian American Art Museum, Washington D.C.). He had also been an assistant in the Department of Drawings with the Fogg Art Museum at Harvard University. He had been a visiting professor at Middlebury College in Vermont.

He was a past member of the Pierpont Morgan Library Council, and had currently been serving as a trustee of the Saint–Gaudens site. He was an active Episcopalian and was named a knight of the Venerable Order of St. John of Jerusalem in 1987. He was on the board of A Christian Ministry in the National Parks.

Dr. Wunder's books included Extravagant Drawings of the Eighteenth Century in the Cooper Union Museum, Frederic Edwin Church and the two-volume Hiram Powers: Vermont Sculptor, 1805–1873.

He received the Smithsonian Institution's Charles Eldredge Prize in 1992 for his work on Powers. Hope presented him with an honorary degree in April of 1999.

Dr. Wunder served as an officer with the United States Army during both World War II and the Korean War. He held his bachelor's, master's and doctorate from Harvard.

Maura Reynolds receives award

Maura Reynolds, director of advising and associate professor of Latin, has received the fourth annual "Vanderbush–Weller Development Fund" award for her strong, positive impact on students.

The award recognizes and supports the efforts of Hope faculty and staff who make extraordinary contributions to the lives of students.

"Maura is an exceptional choice for the Vanderbush–Weller award," said Dr. Richard Frost, who is vice president for student development and dean of students at Hope, and chairs the selection committee of students, faculty and staff. "She handles her responsibilities with competence, compassion and care that extend far above the standard. She is perhaps one individual who knows more students than anybody else through her teaching, advising, planning, first—year scheduling and just helping out with academic questions in general. In short, Maura is awesome."

Maura Reynolds

Professor Reynolds joined the college in 1974 as director of the Academic Support Center, a position she held for four years, also teaching expository writing. She began teaching Latin at Hope in 1980.

She was appointed director of advising in 1988. She also served as coordinator for pilot sections of Hope's "First-Year Seminar" program. She delivered the college's Commencement address in May of 2001, and Opening Convocation address in August of 1998.

Professor Reynolds has helped plan and implement New Student Orientation at Hope since 1987. Since 1989, she has been a member of the staff of the college's Teaching Enhancement Workshop, which is geared toward faculty members about to begin their first year at Hope.

The "Vanderbush-Weller Development Fund" was established in honor of long-time Hope professor and football coach Alvin Vanderbush '29 of Bloomington, Minn., who retired in 1972. It was created by Ken and Shirely Weller of Knoxville, Iowa. Dr. Ken Weller '48 is one of Professor Vanderbush's former players and also a former Hope faculty colleague.

Former staffer celebrates 100th

A former staff member has marked a milestone birthday, turning 100 earlier this year.

Tena Selles of Holland, Mich., celebrated the century mark on Thursday, May 29. Then Tena Housenga, she was a member of the college's custodial staff in the 1960s, working in Voorhees Hall, the President's Home and the Health Clinic. She served in Voorhees at the same time as Isla Pruim '24 Van Eenenaam, who also recently turned 100—on Sunday, Nov. 17, 2002.

Selles's service to the college marked the beginning of a long–time family relationship with Hope. Her son Don has been employed at Hope since 1980, and is head painter on the maintenance staff. Don's wife Pauly (Peil) Housenga attended Hope in the 1960s, and they lived in Dykstra Hall from 1985 to 1989 when she was resident director there. Don and Pauly's three children are all Hope graduates, and all worked on the paint crew with Don: Laurel Housenga '88 Grose of Holland, Heather Housenga '90 Walker of Minneapolis, Minn., and John Housenga '96 of Golden Valley, Minn.

Selles's alumni descendents also include grandchildren Kelly Drooger, Kurt Drooger '81 of Holland and Steve Strating '81 of Jacksonville, Fla. Granddaughter–in–law Peggy Penna '84 Housenga of Zeeland, Mich., and grandson–in–law Steve Grose '88 of Holland are also alumni. Great–granddaughter Megan Drooger recently completed her freshman year at Hope.

And there have been other ties as well. When Don needed to do some repainting of a uniquely textured section of Dimnent Memorial Chapel, he needed only to ask her second husband, Bill Selles, for suggestions. Bill had done the original work.

David Kuiper '88 of Zeeland, Mich., who is senior vice president and mortgage loan officer at Republic Bank in Holland, has been recognized as one of the top producing mortgage loan officers in the country for the fifth year in a row, according to Mortgage Originator Magazine. In 2002, David closed more than 700 mortgage loans totaling in excess of $101 million. David offers a wide variety of mortgage loans to his customers, including construction, jumbo, conventional, government, bridge and lot loans. David is active with the West Michigan Lakeshore Association of Realtors and the Holland Area Home Builder's Association, and has been lending along the Lakeshore for more than 13 years.

Michael Magan '88 of Chevy Chase, Md., has been appointed director of the Center for Faith–Based and Community Initiatives of the U.S. Agency for International Development (USAID). Since its inception in 1961, USAID has done extensive work with relief organizations affiliated with religious institutions. Today, 25 percent of USAID's partners are faith–based organizations. Michael was previously with the U.S. Department of Labor, where he oversaw international programs to combat child labor and human trafficking. He has also served in senior posts at the U.S. Chamber of Commerce and the International Republican Institute in addition to serving in staff positions in Congress.

Steve Paulsen '88 of Paducah, Ky., has left Tickets.com after four-and-a-half years of working in the software installation, support and client education departments. The last assignment for TDC was a two-year posting to New York City to manage the software installation at Carnegie Hall. Steve now has become vice president of business administration for the Four Rivers Center for the Performing Arts, a new performing arts center in Paducah. He notes that he is looking forward to the challenge and to being involved in the business of the arts instead of being a vendor to that business.

Campus Profile

Dr. Brown appreciates from his own experience what an inclusive approach and caring Hope mentors can mean. He had never even been to church while growing up, but what he found at Hope when he enrolled in the fall of 1969 changed his life.

"I discovered here some of the most wonderful people—gracious and kind and accepting, who became for me models of what I wanted to be," he said. "I then discovered in the midst of my admiration that they were shaped and formed by a certain set of convictions and values, all of them together. I discovered that those convictions and values all turned around the Christian faith, and that became a huge invitation to me to accept those and become a Christian myself."

He went on to a career in the ministry and teaching, and spent the past two years back at the college as one of those mentors, guiding the Campus Ministries program, which offers many opportunities for exploring one's faith beyond the academic Contemporary, mid-morning chapel services on Monday, Wednesday and Friday and a Sunday evening "Gathering" worship service regularly host a capacity-and voluntary-audience of some 1,100 students in Dimnent Memorial Chapel. Campus Ministries supervises a large network of student-led Bible study and prayer groups. The office coordinates

"I don't think the quality of academics should go down because it's a Christian school. I searched for a school that had excellence in both."

Carla Carrozziere '03

mission trips throughout the year, particularly during spring break—some 23 trips this year throughout the U.S. and in Caribbean and Latin America.

"My hope is fairly pointed and clear: that each student who comes to us as a Christian believer will grow up into Christ and mature in the Christian faith and become an instrument of righteousness in the world," Dr. Brown said. "I want them to gain a deeper affection for God and become a more effective witness for Jesus Christ wherever they go and whatever they do, seeing themselves as ministers of the Gospel whether that be in science, or education, or business, or anywhere else they may possibly go."

'And for those students who come to us as not Christian believers—they are people of other faiths, or of no articulated faith at all—I want them to both experience the love of Christ modeled in a community of Christian believers and to experience the possibility of life in Christ in the context of the historic Christian faith for themselves," he said

The energy of the faith community was an important consideration for Michael Dolislager '03 of Rocklin, Calif., when he was a prospective student. He had visited prescriptive Christian schools as one possibility for continuing his own journey. He liked Hope's way better.

"I like the fact that we don't have to sign something to come here," he said. "Here it's a choice to live a Christian life, and it makes it much more real, in my opinion."

During his Hope years, Dolislager participated in three mission trips, leading two. He led and participated in Bible

He was so regular a chapel attender that he can remember the few times he missed—once for a job interview, and a few when he was out of state. He remarks on that for what it says about the program.

"I think they're really cool," he said. "There's nowhere else I'd want to be from 10:30 a.m. to 11 a.m. on Monday, Wednesday and Friday."

Carla Carrozziere '03 of Rochester, N.Y., also wanted to attend a school with a good Christian foundation, and was also active in spring break mission trips and Bible studies as a participant and leader, and in the chapel program.

She was further interested in dance, and was drawn to Hope specifically because of the strength of the college's dance and education programs.

"I don't think that the quality of academics should go down because it's a Christian school," Carrozziere said. "I searched for a school that had excellence in

She was especially interested in having an opportunity to combine both interests as a member of the Sacred Dance team. She served most recently as rehearsal director and head choreographer-and as a member of the team even had a chance to open for Jars of Clay during the Christian group's January concert on campus.

Carrozziere has appreciated the way that all of her experiences have shaped her faith journey, building on the foundation of her childhood.

"My freshman year, my first semester, I really had to make my faith my own. Since that decision and that time of 'I really am going to pursue this,' my relationship with Christ has grown," she said. "This campus offers so many opportunities, and I've really been blessed to be here."

Twins set a record

he graduating Class of 2003 included seven sets of twins, believed to be the largest number ever (and certainly the largest number anyone can recall).

During the 1992-93 school year, Hope had had 12 sets of twins in the student body, including seven sets in the freshman class, but the total by graduation was lower for the Class of '96 (two transfers, and some early graduations).

The high number this year was unusual for Hope, but not completely unusual while growing up for all of the graduates, as considered by Sara Whitehouse '03, a management and economic major from Manton, Mich.

"It seems that whenever Amber and other sets of twins in our year."

alumni \land parents \land friends...supporting students

As I went to drop off my last paper at Hope College, I found myself reflecting on my four years at Hope while walking through the pine grove. I look back in amazement at all the memories, but more importantly, I look back in awe of the ways I have grown at Hope.

I believe I truly fulfilled the four-pronged vision of Hope in substantially growing academically, socially, spiritually, and physically. Without the support of brilliant professors, genuine friends, and an amazing campus ministries program none of this growth would have been possible.

However, I am truly thankful for the support of the Hope College alumni, parents and friends. Without your support, the vision of Hope could not have been carried out in my life. I take pride in the fact that when I start my job with the CPA firm of Plante Moran in Ann Arbor, I will be able to join you in saying that I am a proud supporter (and alumnus) of Hope College. THANK YOU!

My overall experience at Hope has been outstanding! While at Hope, I have witnessed the sights, sounds, and daily life of Vienna, Austria and Washington, D.C. In addition, I joined the Delta Phi Sorority, served as a student tour guide, and actively participated in Dance Marathon. If not for the caring professors, helpful faculty members, and generous donors, none of this would have been possible.

In a short time I will move to Washington, D.C., to begin my career in the White House Office of Media Affairs. From the education I received and the life experiences I encountered while at Hope, I have full confidence I will be able to succeed in anything I put my mind to. I look forward to branching out from the Hope community so that I may have the opportunity to let the world know about the Hope difference, which definitely has influenced my life for the better!

Four years at the helm

t's not easy to be in two places at once, but the ability can prove useful.

Given his priorities, it's almost a job requirement for Dr. James Bultman '63, who is completing a fourth year as president of Hope College.

"It's important for Martie [Tucker '63 Bultman] and me to attend most of the college events," he said. "We are genuinely interested in Hope students and faculty."

At Hope College, that emphasis requires no small amount of organization or energy. The campus calendar is so full that there are often multiple major events in the same day, sometimes scheduled simultaneously.

For example, the same Saturday that featured the department of dance's major annual concert, Dance 29, also boasted the student-organized 24-hour Dance Marathon fundraiser for DeVos Children's Hospital, a student recital, and NCAA tournament play for both the men's and women's basketball teams—including a home game for the men in the Dow Center.

It's volume that President Bultman finds compelling not only literally but figuratively. The activity level, and the concurrent quality, reflects an institution for which uncommonly high achievement is a common virtue.

"The college's outstanding quality in the areas of music, dance, theatre, art and intercollegiate sport is very gratifying," he said. "Events like Musical Showcase, Vespers and Dance 29, among others, are all examples of excellence."

He is correspondingly equally pleased by the college's overall academic strength.

"The volume and quality of faculty scholarship and of faculty-student collaboration is also very evident, and I think that this model permeates departments across campus in a very real and exciting way," he said.

Others see it, too. This past fall, the America's Best Colleges 2003 guide published by U.S. News & World Report not only included Hope in the top half of the nation's best national liberal arts colleges, but ranked the college in the top five among all institutions for its research-based approach to undergraduate education.

"Because it's in many ways the cornerstone of our academic program, the recognition in the last U.S. News & World Report College guide, where Hope was tied for fourth in the country in undergraduate research and creative activity, was very satisfying," President Bultman said.

His priorities include helping to assure that Hope continues to offer students the best—an experience that is "simultaneously exceptional educationally and vibrantly Christian."

He is enthusiastic concerning the positive difference being made by the Legacies: A Vision of Hope comprehensive campaign. Even while fund–raising continues, substantial progress has already been made in each of the $105 million drive's four primary efforts.

The new science center is nearing completion and will open this fall, with renovation of the Peale Science Center to follow. Strong support of the endowment initiative has enabled Hope to establish numerous new scholarships. Planning and property acquisition are well along for both the Martha Miller Center and the DeVos Fieldhouse.

Even though the campaign at $100 million is relatively close to the overall goal, the need is higher since some individual projects are relatively under–funded. Construction of the Martha Miller Center and DeVos Fieldhouse, for example, is waiting until Hope obtains enough commitments to fully fund each. Fundraising efforts are intense and on–going.

President Bultman recognizes that the timing could have been better. Developed in the halcyon boom of the late '90s, the campaign was launched only shortly before the economy went bust—leading to conditions that some have called the worst since the Great Depression.

The circumstances make him appreciate all the more the dedication and support that have prompted the successes, particularly when the individual members of the Hope family are experiencing stresses of their own. "I'm very proud of our fundraising team, and of the generosity of our donors in funding these projects in a very difficult time," he said.

It is also the case that the institutional needs exist whether or not the economy is doing well. In fact, the times also present other financial challenges. Particularly given world events, health care, liability insurance and energy costs have all skyrocketed. Endowment income has plummeted as the stock market has languished.

Even as Hope enjoys its strongest freshman applicant pool ever—some 2,500 seeking the 800 or so spaces in the incoming Class of 2007—student financial need is higher than ever, another effect of the tough economy.

"In so many ways, both inside and outside the class-room, our students make us proud for who they are as persons, for their commitment to things just and right and good, and for the energy that they bring to campus life."

- President James Bultman

For the time being, the college has made the situation work. Indeed, President Bultman feels that the students deserve no less

"I'm pleased that so far at least we've been able to weather the economic storm without major disruption to the quality of the Hope experience," he said. "To be sure we could operate with fewer resources, but with a commensurate loss of quality. We have chosen to maintain, even enhance, quality with fewer resources," President Bultman said. "This has occurred, I think, largely because of the commitment of our people to being both effective and efficient in the delivery of the Hope experience."

Central in President Bultman's motivation, even more so than his strong belief in the Hope experience, is his affection for and pride in Hope students.

"Of all the things that bring joy in this job, it's finally the achievements of our students," he said. "In so many ways, both inside and outside the classroom, our students make us proud for who they are as persons, for their commitment to things just and right and good, and for the energy that they bring to campus life."

President Bultman has written in his regular Presidential Update letter to the Hope family of the "intergenerational thing"—the way that those who were students in the past have in turn made a difference for the students of the present and future, in a cycle that has been running since Hope's founding in the 1800s.

He recognizes and appreciates the difference that others have made in his own life, a life itself shaped by the Hope experience some 40 years before. Through his service to Hope, he hopes to do the same for the students of today.

He hopes the rest of the Hope family will join him.

"All of us have been the recipients of the generosity of others, and it only makes sense that now it is our turn to be the providers for a current generation of students," he said.
